LAS VEGAS, Nev.—Longenecker & Associates, Inc. announced today that Mike Briggs has been promoted to Group Vice President for High-Hazard Operations Support, managing L&A's growing business line supporting conduct of operations, operational readiness, field ES&H management and incident response and recovery.

Mike joined L&A in 2018 to stand up the High-Hazard Operations Support business line and the work has grown significantly over the last year, particularly at Los Alamos National Laboratory, Sandia National Laboratories and the Los Alamos Legacy Cleanup Contract.

“Mike has been a tremendous asset in providing this vital support across the Nuclear Security Enterprise,” L&A CEO Bonnie Longenecker said. “We are fortunate to have him as part of our management team and leading our High-Hazard Operations Support work into the future.”

Prior to joining L&A, Mike worked for BWXT and its predecessor companies for more than a decade, serving as the lead for Safety, Industrial Hygiene, Radiation Protection and Occupational Medicine at WIPP M&O contractor Nuclear Waste Partnership LLC. Other leadership roles at BWXT included Site Safety and Training Manager for Paducah cleanup contractor LATA Kentucky and Senior Project Director for Nuclear Fuel Services.

Mike's career began at the Sellafield site in the UK, where he held a number of important operational roles for BNFL at the THORP reprocessing plant before taking on the role of International Facilitation, Resourcing and Training Manager for BNFL, Inc. Mike served as the Training, Development and Culture Change Manager for BNFL at the Advanced Mixed Waste Treatment Plant at the Idaho Site and later as the Senior Manager for Operations, Safety, Health, Environment and Quality for the Pebble Bed Modular Reactor Fuel Division in South Africa.
